

User Testing

To test our UI on real users we decided to create a short survey to gather information about the users thoughts. We created a google form with a link to our Web page and a short intro into what the web application is for. The total responses we received as of the 9/03/2018 were 20 responses. The following are the questions and statistics we received as well as a few answers to the paragraph questions.

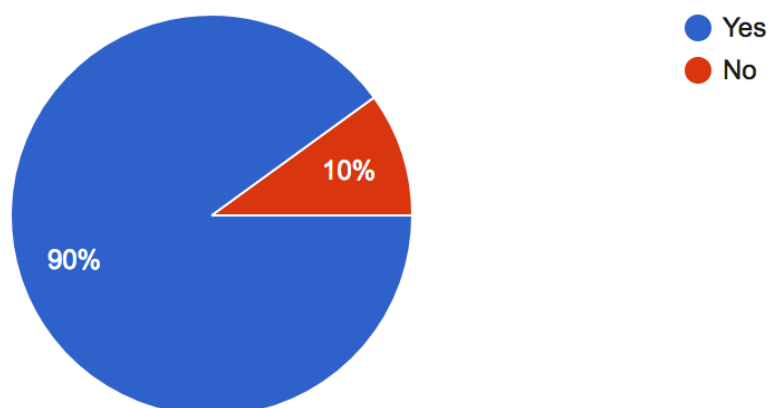

What web browser did you use to view the website?

20 responses

Did you find the information in the website informative?

20 responses

What information was the most interesting to you?

16 responses

The counties that people are tweeting from mainly
The definitive information of the 8th amendment that greets you is really good!
County by county breakdown of tweets
The intro blurb regarding the Taoiseach
That other countries have tweeted about it
How the responses differed by location
To the point
The suggesting of using Irish also to get across to a broader population

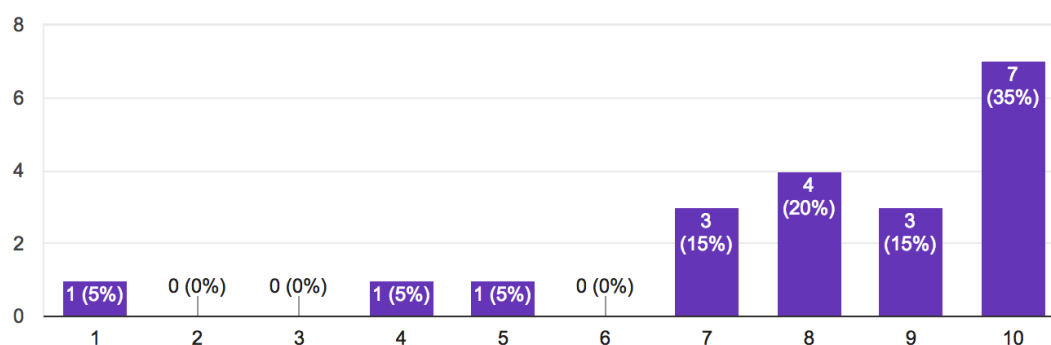

What information was the least interesting to you?

15 responses

Positive/negative tweets didnt mean much
"Number of Tweets collected since 26/02/18"
amount of tweets collected
The country in which the information came from None
The announcement of the referendum as most people already know there is one
Leo varadkar

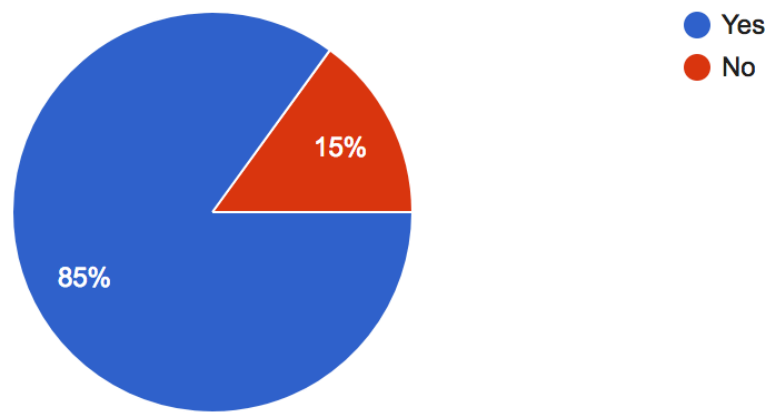

Where the graphs easy to understand on a scale of 1 to 10?

20 responses

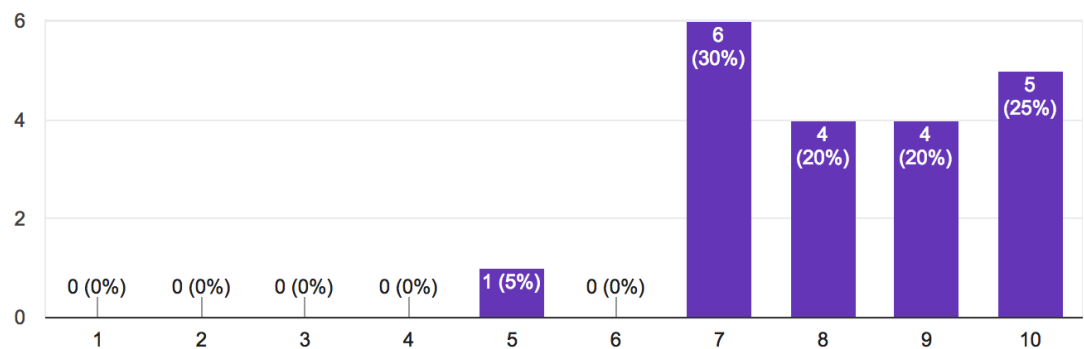

In your opinion, are the graphs laid out in a logical order?

20 responses

What score would you give the layout of the Website?

20 responses

What additional information would you like to see?

12 responses

If people are for or against the referendum rather than positive or negative towards it.
Perhaps a counter for the amount of tweets today would be cool to have in the future age groups of people who said positive/negative...see what it is breakdown in society who supports/rejects the 8th amendment
"graphs" page should fit with the rest of the design/menus. Also information about the purpose of the site seems to be missing from everywhere.
Nothing
Gender
Nothing all good

How do these statistics make you feel?

20 responses

